Chapter 1 by kingston owen

In my world of monotone,
I can't see a single sheen on the road I always walk on.
I scrawled in the monotony of words,
Unable to speak the whole truth
Of the painful reality I always endured.

In my world of monotone,
I brandished my sword along with my words.
I thought my obstinacy would help me
But because of an apparition,
It compelled against me.

I despised myself! Yes, I despised myself!
For I did not vie with sadness.
I don't despise myself! No! I don't despise myself!
For it is not my fault that I got trapped in this world.

I despised myself! I don't despise myself!

My mind began to swirl,

As I continue to live my life in this world of monotone.
